

at the administration, when Mrs. Jonathan P. Dolliver, wife of the Senator from Iowa, arose as Mrs. Masury left the platform and said:

"Daughters of the American Revolution, from the Middle West I come in behalf of my own chapter and of my own judgment and second for the office of president general, the name of Mrs. William Cummings Story."

The other seconds, many in number, then followed, Mrs. John A. Murphy, of Cincinnati, being the first to again gratify the Scott faction by seconding her nomination on behalf of Ohio.

Tribute To Candidate.

In her nominating address, Mrs. Ames, after reviewing the qualities of Mrs. Scott as a woman and as a prospective presiding officer, said:

"If she is elected she proposes to make her residence in Washington and to give her entire time to the attention of this great society."

"I can promise you that her administration will be characterized by her own personality, unhampered by bond or pledge to any one. Her past brilliant experiences, her descent from a line of distinguished ancestry, her literary attainments, make the least State of Illinois proud to present her name with unbounded love and pride to this Congress. She is a woman possessing all of the desirable qualities we most desire in a presiding officer."

Mrs. Ames asked that the Congress give the West a chance, intimating that some other State than New York should furnish the president general. Mrs. Masury, in her reply, evoked applause and laughter when she said that if New York could furnish the timber and could furnish good timber, it should not be discriminated against.

Mrs. Masury's Remarks.

"I come before you today," said Mrs. Masury, "to present the name of a candidate whom I am sure will receive the almost unanimous vote of this Congress. It is my duty and my privilege to tell of all her good qualities. I tell you not of all the organizations she belongs to; it is enough that she is a daughter of the American Revolution. I tell you not that she is a good presiding officer; the fact that she is State regent of New York is sufficient to tell of all her good qualities. I tell you not of all the organizations she belongs to; it is enough that she is a daughter of the American Revolution. I tell you not that she is a good presiding officer; the fact that she is State regent of New York is sufficient to tell of all her good qualities."

"I say to you, my friends, that I am sure you will give your vote for the woman whose name I advocate today. To you New York, I would say, it is your duty and your privilege to give your vote for the woman whose name I advocate today. To you New York, I would say, it is your duty and your privilege to give your vote for the woman whose name I advocate today."

Scenes of utmost confusion were reigning without the hall while these stirring events were taking place within. The crush and jam had been so great in the early morning hours that orders had been issued to the doorkeepers to permit no one to enter except voting delegates. As the hour for convening approached, the crush became greater and many daughters entitled to admission found vainly to get near the doors.

Voters Barred.

Some of those on guard there, it seems, lacked power of discrimination, and, becoming confused as to what the badges signified, declined admission to women who really belonged upon the floor. There was many a wordy tilt between doorkeepers and members, and upon several occasions an irate delegate attempted to shove aside the guarding arm placed across the narrow doorway. Hearing of the confusion without, Mrs. Donald McLean ordered a five-minute recess in order that seating arrangements might be improved. Mrs. McLean asked that if any one was upon the floor who did not have a voting right there, they would immediately leave the hall. There were no exits, however. In the galleries, it was claimed by some of the struggling delegates, that the public, arriving early, had taken possession of the seats, and that members of the society who were without votes occupied some of the voters' seats.

Following the nominations of president general, the other nominations as previously scheduled came in the order of their importance. Because of the reception to the Daughters by President and Mrs. Taft this afternoon, the balloting can hardly begin until late in the afternoon, and inasmuch as there are more than 1,000 votes to be cast and a long ticket to be counted, the result may not be known until midnight or early morning.

Other Nominations.

Mrs. Amos G. Draper and Miranda Barney Tulloch, both of the District of Columbia, were nominated for the office of vice president general in charge of organization. Mrs. Draper, who represents the administration party, was nominated by Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, while Mrs. Tulloch, who is a conservative candidate, was nominated by Mrs. Jonathan P. Dolliver, of Iowa.

Mrs. Alexander E. Patton was the first nominee for the vice presidents general, ten of whom are to be elected at this Congress. The seconds to Mrs. Patton's nomination were almost unanimous. She is a candidate for re-election.

Mrs. Edward Orin, Jr., of Ohio, was the second candidate and the others were Mrs. Charles V. Hickox, of Illinois; Mrs. J. Morgan Smith, of Alabama; Mrs. Charles B. Bryan, of Tennessee; Mrs. A. Kendall, of Maine; Mrs. James M. Fowler, of Indiana; Mrs. Wallace Deland, of Missouri; Mrs. William Todd Helmuth, of New York; Mrs. Edwin Gregory, of North Carolina, and Mrs. John F. Swift, of California.

Ready For Fray.

An hour before the time for opening the convention arrived today Continental Hall was thronged with expectant, nerve-strung delegates, putting in a final word for their candidates. Many of them had arisen early and had renewed the campaign in hotel corridors, where it was temporarily halted at midnight last night.

There were claims and counter-claims; reports of defections here and there; of bolters and those on the fence. When the convention opened it was apparent that some few of the Daughters had not fully made up their minds. Incidents, deemed trivial at any other time, perhaps, are having as much to do with the chances of success for any candidate today as the most consistent arguments advanced as to their respective abilities. With both candidates for president general promising a business-like, non-partisan administration, with each declaring that if elected she would spend much of her time at the society's headquarters in Washington and with each possessing all that might be desired so far as wealth, appearance, and social position might be concerned, the Daughters began to magnify other things.

Alleged Sights.

The insurgents lay great stress upon the two alleged sights to their candidate, Mrs. Story, by the president general. Mrs. Story's failure to recognize Mrs. Story two nights ago when she advanced to the platform to make her report, and the embarrassing situation that ensued, even though it was explained that it was not the fault of the president, but rather of the official reader, was stressed upon every occasion. The incident of yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Story made the report for her State of the contributions to Continental Hall was also used by the conservatives. Mrs. McLean, they said, had a word of commendation and shook hands with every other State regent, but was otherwise occupied when Mrs. Story reached the platform. They used this to advantage today, alleging that it showed bitterness on the part of the administration.

The administration forces are using to advantage the successful administration of Mrs. McLean, and also the theory that New York should not furnish two presidents general in succession. It is time for the West, some of the delegates say, to have a hand in the administration. The conservatives come right back at this with the statement that Mrs. Scott, administration candidate, is the sister of Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson, who was once president general, and that Mrs. Scott's election will establish a precedent of having two presiding officers from the same family. They further argue that Illinois and Indiana have furnished the presidents general for twelve out of the eighteen years the society has been in existence. The discrepancy in ages between the two candidates, Mrs. Scott being considerably the older of the two, is being pointed out to every wavering voter.

Campaign Manager.

Mrs. John Francis Yawger, of New York city, was named last night as campaign manager for Mrs. Story, and assumed active charge of the floor management today. Prior to the convention Mrs. Yawger made the significant statement that the attitude of Mrs. Donald McLean and her adherents toward their candidates has thrown in the closing hours of the campaign scores of votes to Mrs. Story. In fact, she said that the administration itself, through this attitude, was considered the best ally that Mrs. Story and the conservatives had.

Through the various State regents more than $3,000 was paid into the building fund at the afternoon session yesterday. This is exclusive of the $1,000 pledged by Judge Hugh Washington, of Macon, Ga., who said that he and his sister would pay the last $1,000 to be paid on the hall. Judge Washington and his sister, Mrs. Eleanor Washington, of Belham, are the children of the first "Real Daughter" of the society.

Mrs. Matthew T. Scott pledged $250 herself to the building fund, and received an ovation as she announced the gift. Mrs. Story and her delegates rose with the others, in honoring the candidate from Illinois. Another demonstration ensued when Mrs. Story announced New York's gift to the hall.

The Tickets.

The tickets nominated today by the administration, or McLean faction, and the conservative, also called the insurgent faction, follow:

President general, administration, Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, of Illinois; conservative, Mrs. William Cummings Story, of New York.

Vice president general in charge of chapter organizations, administration, Mrs. Amos G. Draper, of Washington; conservative, Mrs. Miranda B. Tulloch, of Washington.

Chapter general, administration, Mrs. Esther F. Noble, of the District; conservative, Mrs. Joseph A. Gillilan, of Minnesota, and the District.

Recording secretary general, administration, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, of the District; conservative, Mrs. Eleanor L. Thorne, of Seattle, and the District.

Corresponding secretary general, Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt, of the District; conservative, Mrs. Mary R. Wilcox, of Tennessee, and the District.

Registrar general, administration, Mrs. William V. Cox, of the District; conservative, Mrs. Grace M. Pierce, of New York, and Washington.

Treasurer general, administration, Mrs. William D. Hoover, of the District; conservative, Mrs. Della Sheldon Jackson, of the District.

Historian general, Mrs. Frank H. Briggs, of the District; conservative, Mrs. Gertrude R. Darwin, of the District; assistant historian general, administration, Mrs. Henry S. Brown, of New York; conservative, Mrs. Richard Lagitt, of Florida, and the District.

Librarian general, administration, Mrs. Woodbury Pulsifer, of the District; conservative, Mrs. Short A. Willis, of the District.

Ten vice presidents general, from as many States, against whom the conservatives have no candidates: Alabama, Mrs. J. Morgan Smith; Pennsylvania, Mrs. A. E. Patton; Maine, Mrs. A. Kendall; Missouri, Mrs. Wallace Deland; Tennessee, Mrs. Charles B. Bryan; Ohio, Mrs. Edward Porton, Jr.; Illinois, Mrs. Charles B. Hickox; Indiana, Mrs. James M. Fowler; California, Mrs. John F. Swift; North Carolina, Mrs. Edwin C. Gregory.

The conservatives feel especially friendly, it is said, toward the candidates from Pennsylvania, Maine, California, and Tennessee, and these will receive practically the full vote of both factions. Others may be "scratched" to some extent, although there is no active opposition.

Sons' Reception.

The Sons of the American Revolution again tendered the Daughters a reception last evening. This annual love feast between Sons and Daughters has become a feature of every Continental Congress, and the reception of last night exceeded rather than lacked the brilliancy of former ones.

The affair was held at the First Congregational Church, the pastor, the Rev. S. H. Woodruff, opening the exercises with prayer. Edward Bruce Moore, Commissioner of Patents, greeted Mrs. Donald McLean and her daughters, and in a happy address felicitated the society upon the completion of its magnificent hall.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma, a long-time friend of the society general, made the principal address. His speech was particularly pleasing to feminine ears in that it abounded in flowery figures of speech about womanhood and what the sex had accomplished in the world.

Mrs. McLean responded in an impressive speech, and formally invited the Sons to share with them their building "in unity, peace, harmony, and happiness."

The Colonial Dames also had the visiting members of the Congress as their guests yesterday at the Arlington Hotel, last night, the society had as its guests many of the delegates to the convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution. A special receiving line was formed for them, Lee Robinson presenting the guests.

DAUGHTERS ATTEND

ANNUAL DIXIE BALL

At the annual "Dixie" ball of the Robert E. Lee Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, at the Arlington Hotel, last night, the society had as its guests many of the delegates to the convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution. A special receiving line was formed for them, Lee Robinson presenting the guests.
